

Media Contact: Sarah Fazendin
Sarah@FazendinPortfolio.com
1.303.993.7906

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Learn the Secrets of Wildlife Photography in Africa Join Professional Photographer Lex Hes on Safari in South Africa

DENVER, CO (January 22, 2008) –A welcome departure from the standard African safari, EcoTraining's safari programs have for years been providing a hands-on experience for travelers exploring the African bush. This May, travelers can also learn to photograph African wildlife and scenery like a pro with EcoTraining partner and professional wildlife photographer Lex Hes.

“For international travelers to South Africa, there is no better way to learn about and photograph the African bush,” said Lex Hes, founder of EcoTraining. “This safari experience will provide a hands-on opportunity for course participants to learn about their subject matter, the flora and fauna of the African bush, and then move into professional instruction on how to photograph this wildlife and nature.”

Throughout this safari experience, course participants will be staying in the renowned Klaserie Private Game Reserve and part of the Greater Kruger National Park. This makes for a very special and unusually affordable safari option for this region of southern Africa, while providing excellent opportunities to enjoy prolific birdlife, abundant plains game and regular visits from members of the Big Five. Accommodation is in cool, en-suite thatched chalets secluded under a thicket of trees. A plunge pool, viewing and dining decks next to the river and a spacious central living area provide an ideal “bush classroom” environment. The lodge is run on solar power and meals are taken in the dining area overlooking a water hole where wildlife literally comes to you.

MORE

PAGE 2

After six days spent in the African bush learning the “subject matter”, travelers will begin four days of intensive photography training with Lex Hes. This 10-day safari package is priced at $2,343 per person, including transfers to the camp and all ground expenses. Visit www.ecotraining.co.za for more details on this wildlife photography safari experience.

EcoTraining’s philosophy is that no one can truly appreciate Africa’s wild places without actually spending time in the wild. Whether looking for professional safari guide training or for a learning vacation with a difference and an opportunity to experience the African bush first-hand, EcoTraining strives to educate and instill the great passion for the African bush in travelers from around the world.

For more information on EcoTraining or to reserve your space on this photography safari please contact EcoTraining’s North American office at 1.303.993.7906 or Contact@FazendinPortfolio.com.

END